

Is a Cloud-Based Phone System Right for Your Business?

View this checklist to see if your business is a fit.

Do you operate out of multiple locations?

Whether you have multiple offices now or are planning for future growth, the flexibility of a cloud-based system makes adding or removing users simple for IT.

Are your employees mobile?

Today's workforce is on the move, and often operating from multiple devices on any given workday. Cloud communications accommodates today's style of work with the ability to work from virtually anywhere.

Are IT resources limited?

Keeping it simple is one of the advantages of operating in the cloud. From server maintenance to security updates, your internal resources need only to worry about day-to-day operations.

How would you rate your level of service?

VoIP technology and unified communications offer integration of communication methods like text, chat, video, call forwarding, conferencing, etc. so employees can maximize team efforts and respond more efficiently to customers.

Is it time for a modern phone system?

Legacy technology not only puts your business at a disadvantage competitively, but it can also leave you susceptible to security risks and inability to meet customer expectations.
